

The Iceland Divide:

A North-South Bike-Packing Route

Cartographer: Joshua Mason (2026)

Source: Natural Science Institute of Iceland, Esri Living Atlas, U.S. NGA, NSF, Polar Geospatial Center, University of Minnesota, Bikepacking.com.
Projection: ISN2004 LAEA Iceland.

The Iceland Divide is among the most difficult bike-packing routes in the world. This route takes an average of 10 days to complete, beginning in the city of Akureyri in the North, and ending in Vik.

Throughout this treacherous journey, roughly 325 miles of rugged Icelandic terrain are traversed, featuring unique geology, unpredictable weather, and an extremely limited food supply. Saddle up for the amazing journey ahead!

